Laborites Question NATO Tie

Want A-Arms Out, New EEC Talks

BLACKPOOL, England, Oct. 1 (AP)—Leaders of Britain's opposition Labor party today threw the nation's future with Europe and its allies wide open. They decided to support a resolution demanding the removal of U.S. nuclear beses from this country and another to renevotiate the terms of Britain's membership of the European Common Market.

Some members of the Labor party's Executive Committee ear-lier emerged from a five-hour ession reporting that another decision has been taken recom-mending that Britain should take a neutral stance between the world's power blocs and also should withrdaw from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Early Report Denied

This was later denied by a spokesman for the Labor party who said that the National Executive Committee had rejected the proposal that a future Labor government should pull Britain out of NATO.

The spokesman confirmed however that the national executive had voted in favor of a resolution which said in part: "The presence of American bases prevents us from taking the kind of political stance which would encourage world nuclear disarmament. There is no doubt this country presents a sitting target. This conference is opposed to any British defense policy which is based on the use or the threatened use of nuclear weapons either by this country or by us allies and demands the removal of all nuclear bases in this

In practice this would mean a Labor government would be bound to seek the removal of the U.S. Polaris nuclear submarine hase at Holy Loch in Scotland and U.S. Air Force bases elsewhere in Britain.

After a series of closes votes, the executive backed a resolution calling for a drostic revision of Common Market policies—from referendum here affords a strik-(Continued on Page 2, Col. 7) ing test of the traditional promise Common Market policies-from

Referendum Today

Polls See Danes Voting for EEC

By Bernard D. Nossiter COPENHAGEN, Oct. 1 (WP),-Youth against the middle-aged establishment. The increasing remoteness of government versus assured material gain. The national flag against enlarged European cooperation. These are the central issues here as Danes go to the polls tomorrow to decide wbether they will join the Common Market.

On streetcorners, student ac-tivists have been selling sacks of Danish soil, raising money to "saye" Denmark from "foreign domination" but Premier Jens Otto Krag has been stumping the country, warning that a "no" vote will mean a deep cut in living standards for this prosperous wel-

The striking feature of the lively debate here is its challenge to conventional politics. The entry issue has cut across traditional party lines, bringing together the unlikeliest bedfellows in both camps. Moreover, it is raising fresh questions about the style of life that are more and more appearing on political agendas everywhere in the West.
Just as in neighboring Norway, where voters rejected the Common Market last weekend, the

and an interest-free loan for the affluent society,

Today more than 70,000 Danes opposing the Market marched through the streets of Copenhagen and crowded Town Hall Square to overspill in what was probably the biggest popular demonstration in Denmark since World War II, There was a carnival-like atmosphere of op-timism and enthusiasm as the vanguard of the procession carried the Danish and the Norwegian flags into the square.

But the prevailing wisdom in both camps holds that Denmark will ignore its neighbor's exampie and will vote to join the enlarged European Economic Com-munity in the hinding referendum. A telephone poll published yesterday in the Copenhagen newspaper Politiken shows a big gain for the "yes" camp, an edge of 17 percentage points compared to only 11 a week ago and a bare one-point margin in August. The Gallop Poll, which accurately predicted the Norwegian result, has reflected a similar swing. Industrialists and farmers, with the clearest vested interest in membership, saved moch of their campaign ammunition for the last 10 days, and their blitz seems to be working. But even if the prevailing wisdom is accurate, the astonishing feature here is that there will almost surely be a substan-19 Die in Turret Explosion tial "no" turnout despite clearcut economic windfalls for entry and equally clear economic pen-alties for staying ontside.

The farmers, about 19 percent of the work force, are the surest beneficiaries. The Common Market fixes farm prices above those existing here and membership means an immediate gam estimated at $100 million. All of this will be in much-needed foreign currencies, and the sum is likely to more than double in a

On the other hand, staying out of the market threatens Danish farmers with the loss of their ricb bacon and botter exports to Britain. The United Kingdom is going into the community and will then be forced to feed itsel! with produce from fellow members. The loss to Danish producers could be as much as $300 million yearly. Warning on Devaluation For a small country runging persistent deficits in its trading balances, these sums are huge. Mr. Krag has threatened that a "no" vote will force Denmark to devalue its krone and cut back on welfare benefits. This is an archetypal welfare state, jobless and sick workers most as solidly for entry as the farmers. Like their colleagues everywhere, they have an almost mystical faith in the virtue of bigger markets. They look for-ward to profitable mergers with other Common Market concerns and discreetly envision taming Denmark's well-organized unions by threatening to move plants to more docile regions.

Pinally, just as in Norway, the established political leadership here is solidly for entry. Mr. Krag's Social Democrats, the Conservatives and two center parties have voted for entry in the Folketing (parliament) 141 to 32.

Against all this is the fact that incomes here average nearly $1,000 per person and poctet-book concerns are no longer as overwhelming as they were a generation ago. As in Norway, the anti-Mar-

Nixon Affirms SALT Pact, Sees War Danger Reduced

-Halling it as a step reducing the danger of war, President Nixon has signed a congressional resolution approving his agreement with Soviet leaders to limit the two powers' offensive nuclear arms for five years—the so-called SALT pact.

The biggest surprise to date in the presidential contest has been Mr. Nixon's strength among young voters.

The enthusiasm for Sen. Mc-Govern on the college campuses of the nation—so marked in the early months of 1972-has faded considerably; and the vote of those who have never attended college has favored Nixon. Mr. Nixon's lead over Sen. Mc-Govern in late August among likely young voters was 50 to 46 percent, compared with 52 to 43 percent in mid-September. Young voters who have attenddefensive systems." In a series of interviews, the following Soviet military developments were disclosed:

• Tests of a streamlined new warhead for intercontinental bal-listic missiles (ICBMs) which enters the atmosphere over the target much more rapidly than current warheads, improving accuracy because of reduced buffeting by crosswinds and increasing the difficulty of interception by antiballistic missiles (ABMs).

• Test flights of a 200-milerange submarine-launched missile that employs some sort of ground scanning device to correct its course and zero in on target The maneuvering warhead, experts say, might be applicable to ICBMs to increase their accu-

ROME, Oct. 1 (NYT) .- A proposed accord between Washington and Rome whereby the United States Navy is to acquire a home port for a submarine tender on a small island off Sardinia's north coast is becoming a major political issue here.

Although nobody has yet offi-cially said so, the United States support unit is presumably meant to service both conventional and nuclear submarines. The prospect of hypothetical involvement in stomic warfare is frightening many Serdinians and other Ital-

The Communist party and other leftist groups have seized on the draft home-port agreement as alleged proof of government sub-servience to the United States. Communist members of parlia-ment have submitted formal requests to Premier Giulio Andreotti and his ministers to provide official explanations of the proposed agreement to the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate

The regional government Sardinia, which has just resigned for reasons of local politics, in one of its last official actions appealed to the central government in Rome to re-examine the proposed deal with the United States.

Debate Scheduled Pending the parliamentary debate, scheduled for Friday, the government is withholding information on the matter. The United States Navy announced earlier this month that an agreement between the United States and Italy to reassign the attack submarine tender Howard W. Gilmore from Key West, Fla., to the island of La Maddalena, off Sardinia, was "In the final stages of completion."

The accord, described as a home-port arrangement, will enable some 800 dependents of officers and enlisted men serving aboard the Howard W. Gilmore to live on the island. Contracts for housing will be made for five-

The Communist campaign against the proposed home port agreement concerning La Maddalena ignores the presence of Soviet nuclear submarines in the Mediterranean and emphasizes the alleged dangers of atomic radiation in an already heavily polluted sea.

Misgivings over the accord are shared also by non-Communists. Corriere della Sera, of Milan, Italy's largest newspaper and a constant critic of Communism, wrote last week that "in a few months Italy will have the doubtful privilege of hosting the first base for American nuclear submarines in the Mediterranean."

The statement said the ceasefire was due to take effect at 0617 GMT today, but firing from the Pakistani side continued until 0730 GMT. Since then, however, the front had been quiet.

The statement attributed the delay in implementation to a possible hold-up in instructions reaching forward positions.

A flag meeting between the opposing commanders was being held today. Tarkundi Forest is near Rajami in mountainous country about 60 miles southwest of Srinagar, the Kashmir capital. There were no Indian casual-

By William M. Freeman NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (NYT).-Richard Crooks, 72. the tenor who was for many years a star of the Metropolitan Opera in New York and for 14 years the featured singer of the "Voice of Firestone." died Friday of cancer at his home in Portola Valley, Calif.

Mr. Crooks was an established singer with a world reputation when Giulio Gatti-Casazza, then the general manager of the Metropolitan Opera, announced in 1933 that he would be one of eight new singers in the season

He first drew attention in 1922. at the age of 22, when he sang excerpts from Wagner's "Siegfried" with Florence Easton and the New York Symphony under Walter Damrosch.

In 1925, Mr. Crooks left for Europe to further his studies and by 1927 he was singing opera in Hamburg and Berlin. He returned frequently for concerts and recitals, including a performance of Mahler's "Das Lied von der Erde" with Margaret Matzenauer and the New York Philharmonic under Willem Mengelberg.

Reputation Gained With the Met's invitation, his reputation gained even more stature, and, for 10 years or so, he was heard regularly in many operas. Among them were "Tosca," "Manon," "La Traviata." "Linda di Chamounix," "Mignon," "Faust," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Don Glovanni".

> By Henry Tanner CAIRO, Oct. 1 (NYT).-Egypt and the Soviet Union have started to undertake the normalization of their relations on a new basis, without any Soviet military presence on Egyptian soil but with friendly cooperation in economic and other fields.

This, according to informed diplomats, is the meaning of the announcement last night that Premier Aziz Sidky will go to Moscow Oct. 16 for the first highlevel talks between the two governments since President Anwar Sadst announced the abrupt ouster of an estimated 20,000 Soviet pilots, missile crews and advisers last July 18.

The president's decision came after a secret meeting here Friday night between Mr. Sadat President Hafez Assad of Syria, who had come to Cairo. from an equally secret visit to Political sources affirmed that Mr. Assad played the role of an active mediator between Mescow

The sources stressed that whatever form the friendlier climate between Egypt and the Soviet Union might take, there would be no going back on Egypt's deci-sion that there must be no Soviet military presence on Egyptian territory.

300 Russians Stay On About 300 Soviet military instructors are all that is left of this presence. Soviet warships continue to use Egyptian navai facilities in Alexandria, Marsa Matruh and Port Said.

It is expected here that one of Mr. Sidky's first tasks in Moscow to obtain assurances that the Kremilin will continue to provide epare parts and replaceme the Soviet weapons now in Egypt. Egypt remains beavily dependent on such supplies since practically all its military equipment is from the Soviet bloc.

Mr. Sidky is thought certain to discuss the future of the large nevelopment projects that are being conducted here with Soviet Unancial and technical assistance. Questions of trade, which is heavy in both directions, also are throught to be high on the list of topics.

As foreign specialists here see it. Mr. Sidky's bargeining power will be considerable, since the Soviet Union must be anxious to protect its massive investment in

When Mr. Sadat announced the ouster of the Russians, Mr. Assad stated publicly at once that he would not follow suit. Some Syrian of-ficials voiced bitter criticism of the Egyptian action.

Aden Proposes a Cease-Fire In Clash With North Yemen

BEIRUT, Oct. 1 (UPD).—South Yemeni troops have captured the North Yemeni border town of Qatasba after a 15-bour air and artillery bombardment, the North Yemeni Embassy in Belrut said

"Unless South Yemeni troops withdraw from Qataaba," the embassy said in a statement, the armed forces of the [North] Yemeni Arab Republic will force them to do so."

In Aden, the South Yemeni government called for a ceasefire along the border between the two countries, where ground and air fighting has been going on for the past five days, the Iraqi News Agency said.

The North Yemeni Embassy said Qataaba came imder a "concentrated air and ground attack for 15 hours, in which 17 warplanes, some of them flown by foreigners, took part.

"Three divisions, backed by heavy artillery and commanded by Ali Antar, the deputy defense inister of South Yemen, also took part in the attack," the statement said.

The nuclear arms race, instead of being limited, is being changof being limited, is being changed from a race for quantity to a race for quantity to a race for guality, it added.

The agreements encourage and even legitimize such a change, the report said. Thus the competition in arms will in future be fueled by technological ad-vances, so that "fimitation may well turn into escalation."

Skyscrapers West of Paris Get Go-Head

But Further Projects Suspended for Review

PARIS, Oct. I (AP).-French Prime Minister Pierre Messmer has approved the construction of three controversial skysgrapers west of the Arc de Triomphe but said other building plans which moy alter the city's character would have to be reviewed, it was learned today.

Mr. Messmer, who made his decision after consultation with President Georges Pompidou, thus had the last word of a debate in which many Parisians demanded the truncating of the three skyscrapers now under construction at La Défense, a new business center, because they said the buildings would be seen standing behind the Arch of Triumph from the bottom of the Champs-Elysées and beyond, thus interfering with Paris's most harmonious perspective.

Mr. Messmer, in a letter to Equipment Minister Olivier Guichard, said the construction of the three buildings "should not be revised." because "It is necessary to encourage contemporary architecture" and because the plans were agreed upon "a long time ago." He also said the La Défense center, three miles west of the Arc de Triomphe where eight skyscrapers already have been built and 18 others are planned, "is an exceptional project in Europe, by both its dimensions and its coherence."

"Each epoch must bring its contribution to the architecture of Paris," the prime minister added, "and fixing the development of the capital in the sole respect of the past should be out of the

Building Banned

Mr. Mcsamer partly gave satisfaction to opponents of the La Défense project—including several cabinet ministers—by deciding to stop all other construction which may alter the Arc de Triomphe perspective, particularly two proposed buildings which would show up in the middle of the monu-

"I'm convinced that the Arc de Triomphe perspective, which is known the world over, should not be altered by buildings which would be perceptible under its arch," Mr. Messmer said. He said the plans for such buildings would also be submitted to revision.

The sponsors of the La Défense center were severely criticized recently by many personalities in the arts and some government officials, including Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Cultural Affairs Minister Jacques Duhamel, for the proposed skyscrapers in a city where, as a rule, buildings bad been kept to seven or eight stories.

One argument for the continuation of the project was that the plans were known years in advance and were not opposed until very recently. It was also said that the suggestion to lop off the top of the three skyscrapers now under construction would cost too much.

Loris Fortuna, a Socialist who cosponsored the new divorce law, warned in a statement last week that collusion between the church-backed Christian Democrats and the Communists might transform Italy into a "clerical republic."

The divorce law became effective 22 months ago, making it for the first time in modern Italy to dissolve a marriage legally. So far, about 15,000 divorce decrees have been

But Mr. Fortuna and others who advocate a state system free of church interference now are worried that the divorce law may be doomed. They charge that the Communist party is making itself ovaliable to join in watering down or repealing the law.

convincing. The pro-divorce forces were a larmed by the Communist party's mild reaction to an oddress in which Pope Paul VI recently scemed to request a revision of the divorce law.

The Pope spoke during a formal visit to the Vatican by President Giovanni Leone. The address, as usual studded with allusions that permitted various interpretations. was widely understood to mean that the Vatican was in favor of a referendum to repeal the divorce law.

Such a referendum must be held under the constitution because an anti-divorce movement

PARIS, MONDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1972 North Vietnam, a Visitor Believes, Is Willing to Fight On Indefinitely

By Richard Dudman

This is a summarizing article by the chief Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, who spent two weeks, from Sept. 1 to 16, in North Vietnam.

WASHINGTON.-With a calm sense of the inevitable, North Vietnamese leaders are assuming that President Nixon will be reelected and are preparing for four more years of war, if necessary. At the same time, they exprss willingness to negotiata peace terms with Mr. Nixon, either before or after the election, so long as that does not mean giving up their goal of "freedom and independence for all Vietnam.

This reporter's dominant impression, after two weeks of observation in Hanol and 750 miles of travel through the countryside, is that North Vietnam is willing and able to fight on almost indefinitely. North Vietnamese often quote the late President Ho Chi Minh's call in 1966 to "fight until complete victory" and his warning that the war might still last 10 or 30 years or longer, that Hanoi, Haiphong and other cities might be destroyed, but that the Vietnamese people would never give up.

In his will, he told his people that although new sacrifices would be necessary. "our rivers, our mountains, our men will always remain" end that when victory at last was won "we will rebuild our country 10 times more beautiful.

His words appear to be generally accepted as the literal truth.

Some Cities Devastated

Some cities have been largely devastated. One of the first was the panhandle railhead city of Vinh, which earlier visitors reported to have been almost destroyed by the Johnson administration's bomb-

This reporter observed that much of Nam Dinh, once North Vietnam's third largest city, and almost all of the provincial capital. of Ninh Binh have been leveled by what appeared to have been saturation bombing. North Vietnamese officials said those places had been hit heavily this year as well as in the 1960s. Through the countryside, many villages and towns were found to have been almost totally wrecked. The railroad and highway junction town of Phu Ly. 35 miles south of Hanoi, was one example. Many brick kilns in the open countryside appeared to have been bombed this year. "We don't know why they attack the brick kilns," my interpreter said. "Maybe they think they are something more modern."

Some of the bomb craters were already overgrown with grass and brush, leftovers from the Johnson bombing period. At other places, fresh dirt and freshly produced rubble pointed to the Nixon bombing campaign of this year. Hanoi itself, with some spectacular exceptions, had not yet been bombed systematically. The suburbs have been hit hard and repeatedly. Officials showed the destruction of apartment houses in the middle of two large housing projects well inside the city limits— hulldings that hardly could have been mistaken for anything else. In Caves and Huts

But the destroyed cities already had been largely evacuated, and their essential functions were going on in caves and huts scattered through the countryside. And many of the factories and other essential functions in Hanoi had long since been evacuated—as had about half the population-according to North Vietnamese officials.

Officials said repeatedly that they were prepared to abandon Hanol completely if President Nixon went ahead with what they considered a logical next step in escalation, the use of B-52s for the "carpet bombing" of the capital.

The probable effect of that strategy was impossible for a visitor to estimate. What could be said with certainty was that the heavy and continual bombing of North Vietnam by the Nixon administration, starting last April, had failed to prevent the production and distribution of essential supplies and had failed to weaken morale

A two-week observation of the North indicates that the bombing had been sufficient to cause pain and misery to thousands of civilians but has fallen far short of achieving the military objective of wrecking North Vietnam's capacity to wage war, wrecking its economy or wrecking its will to carry on,

The North Vietnamese, in addition to their own efforts to cope with the bombing, have had good inck in the weather. The worst tropical storms struck elsewhere in the region, and there was no repetition of last year's floods. There were general predictions nf a bumper rice crop this month.

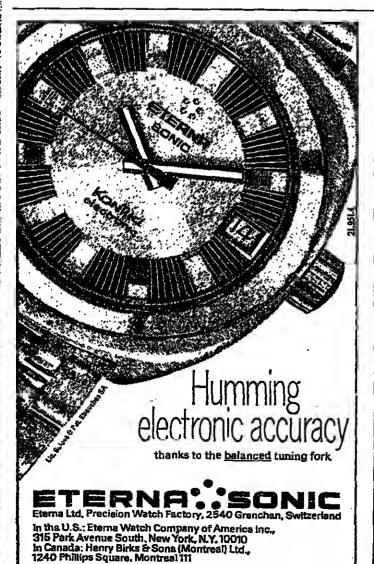

Swarms of Children

Everywhere were signs of long-range preparations to continue the fight as long as necessary. Local officials pointed to the swarms of bors and girls of all ages in the towns and villages as proof that manpower could continue to be adequate as long as the war lasted Nor was there any indication that the country is short of men and women of military age. Many were seen on the streets. Officials said that many had been exempted from military service to continue studies that were regarded as essential.

Birth control is widely practiced in North Vietnam, Contraceplive devices are sold cheaply in drugstores, and abortions are said to be available at request. At the same time, large families are in vogue, probably with government encouragement. Young men and women often said, in answer to questions, that the right age for marriage was 18 for a woman and 20 for a man and that they hoped to have four or five children.

A Swedish diplomat in Hanoi told how North Vietnam had hegun specific planning even for the postwar period. He has been working with North Vietnamese officials on a Swedish economic aid program; it includes not only a program for population control and grant for medical supplies—both in the immediate future—bot also plans for Swedish assistance in the construction of a paper

"I have worked on similar assistance projects with officials of Pakistan, Syria and Egypt, but I never before have dealt with such sophisticated economic planners as the North Vietnamese," he said. A conversation with a clerk in a gift shop in downtown Hanoi gave a sense of how at least one family has adapted to the bombing and how it regards the future. It was significant, too, that the goods she was selling in the state-owned store were tortoise-shell junks and carved ivory horses and roosters-hardly the bare essentials one

Children Evacuated

"There have been frequent bombing attacks along the way, and my husband didn't want me to go," she said. "He started last night by main to the last station, and then the last 20 miles on his motorbike, which he took with him on the train." She said the boy had been evacuated during the Johnson administration's bombing campaign.

"He was a year old at the time, and I had to wean him a few months early," she recalled.

The children are longing to return, but they told us last time we saw them that they know they can return to Hanol only when there are no more American planes.

She said that her husband, who worked in the Foreign Min-istry, had arranged a day nff to visit their children, a boy, 2, and for freedom and independence. We are willing to accept any saori-

The retired former commander of all U.S. forces in the Pacific sees Vietnamization as a success and holds it 'absolutely es-

By John S. McCain jr. HONOLULU.-Viewing my tenure as commander in chief Pacific forces, I am struck by the realization that there have been tremendous changes in this vast area within these four years. The United States has made great strides in attaining the goals of the Nixon Doctrine, which call for continued United States leadership in the Pacific-but with reduced American forces. Under the Nixon Doctrine, foreign policy and our national security strategy of realistic deterwe have carefully and safely reduced our military manpower in the Pacific command from a high of more than one million servicemen and servicewomen to less than 500,000. U.S. military withdrawals are continuing as our friends and allies assume ever greater responsibility for their own defense.

In South Vietnam, successful Vietnamization has permitted continued disengagement and re-deployment of United States forces, so that by Dec. 1 we will have reduced our commitment there from over half a million men to less than 27,000. From a military viewpoint, I feel this is sound figure. Were it not for the hordes of new North Viet-Lamese invaders into South Vietnam this spring, the U.S. military presence throughout South Asia could have been even further

ARVN Improved

President Nixon's plan to reduce the total U.S. troop commitment in South Vietnam is a result of our confidence that the South Vietnamese can continue their own defense. We are seeing a mnch-improved South Vietnamese fighting force. The South Vietnamese are doing sound military planning; the South Vietnamese Army has come of age: and the South Vietnamese Air Force is performing a steadily growing role in support of South Vietnamese Army ground forces. Vietnamization is successful.

During the last four years South Vietnam has survived two major offensives from the North. The first was the Tet offensive of 1968. The second came lest Easter weekend.

Many factors contributed to the halt of this most recent North Vietnamese invasion. The most important is the gallant manner which the South Vietnamese armed forces rose to stop the enemy. They have shown the enemy and themselves they can succeed. They are good. second most important resulted from the President's decision to mine the port of Haiphong and other North Vietnamese water-ways, and to attack North Vietnam's logistics lines and war-making capability.

The President's decision to mine the harbors and renew the air attacks was a most courageous one. All of the ports have been mined, and the minefields have not been crossed or breached since then by any merchant ships. While we have seen some minor lightering activities, this has been minimal; and we have destroyed many of the small craft involved in that lightering activity. The effect of the mining will be most apparent as the stockpiles of Yorth Vietnam are depleted and her ability to mount major milltary activities on strict timetables is thereby denied.

Role Fulfilled

The U.S. forces have fulfilled their role in supporting the South Vietnamese in a superb manner. Particularly noteworthy and effective have been the U.S. air operations against the invading enemy forces. The B-52s, naval surface ship gunfire, the Air Force and Navy tactical air sup-port aircraft, the gunships and air transports working on a round-the-clock basis in conjunction with the growing Vietnamese Air Force—al contributed a deci-sive role in beating the enemy invaders in Kontum, in An Loc. invaders in Komsum, in Al Loc, and now in Quang Tri. This U.S. naval and air power has assisted the South Victnamese ground forces in taking the initiative on the battlefields against a highly mobile invading force of superior numbers and sophisti-influence on the North Vietna- had dominated that area for more mese failure. First, North Vietnam's leaders had counted on a general aprising among the populace of South Vietnam. It did not take place. The South Vietnamese people, unwilling to go over to the other side, moved south by the hundreds of thousands to avoid coming under control of the northern forces, just as they did in 1954.

Another area of significant change in the Pacific came on May 15, 1972, with the reversion of Okinawa to Japanese prefectural status. Since the end of World War II, Okinawa had been under U.S. control. Planning for this reversion began in 1969, and culminated last May. The agreements with Japan provide that the United States may retain military bases there, a key requirement for the United States deterrent posture in the Pacific.

As commander in chief of all United States Pacific forces, I have had the responsibility for the defense of our national interests and our deterrent posture from the Arctic to Antarctica and across the broad expanse of the Pacific from California to the western Indian Ocean, Indicative of this great expanse and indicative of the importance of even the most remote parts of this broad area of United States interest, we are building a communications facility on the island of the Indian Ocean. This facility is being built with the coopera-tion of the United Kingdom, and the United States will continue to operate ships in the Indian Ocean periodically.

Free world security throughout East Asia continoes to rest on a combination of U.S. defense treaties, such as the South-East Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) and ANZUS; the other strong regional agreements among Asian nations, and the five-power defense arrangement for Majaysia and Singapore, which involves forces from Great Britain, New Zealand and Australia.

I have regularly and strongly npheld the wisdom of maintaining adequate military defense in the Pacific through collective security during my four years as commander. Lately, I find it necessary to remind my countrymen that the finest weapons systems won't mean a thing if we don't support the men who defend our people and our soil.

So far eight Valencia University professors and instructors have been suspended. The university's rector and governing board have threatened to resign, and halt the opening of the university unless the eight are reinstated. Sources said the names of the eight are on the "blacklist" compiled by the military surveillance group, headed by Lt. Col. Josa Ignacio San Martin, who has become one of Spain's must feared men in the past 18 months. His ogents operate within government ministries, particularly education. To counteract opposition among the 5,000-member contract professiorial corps, the ministry has offered to extend contracts to three and five years.

The purge of campus dissidents -which will also include about 150 students who will not be permitted to register because of their political backgrounds-was seen as part of the regime's hard-nosed drive to end political dis-turbances in the universities.

The campaign was signalied this summer when Gen, Franco issued a decree placing the universities under direct government control. The decree made university administrators and professors responsible for maintaining law and order on the campus and discipline in the classrooms.

At the same time Cien. France suspended the chartres of Madrid's Complatente out Autonomous universities, whileh have a total eproliment of 160,000 to. professors and instructors.

The decrees led to the resignations of the restors of these inc universities. They felt, according to sources, that they could not "remain leachers and the guardians of a shadow ef academic feredom and net as policemen for the regime." The rectors of three other universities have also resigned. With the five went their dears and their administrative assistants.

Academic sources said that Education Minister Jose Luk Vilar Palasi, a moderate, is even now trying to slow the purge and veto Col. San Murtin. The sources pointed out that has May the minister presented over the colonel when he rejected the colonel's demand that he rug several projectors with terms who, at least in theory, are trateuchable in Spain. Spanish universities have been in a state of escalating political turmoil for the past 12 trans They reached a critical point last year when they were virtually paralyzed by ctrikes and repeated claudes with police.

This year, with encountent up from 200,000 to nearly 200,000, and with five more universities planned to open in the fall of 1973, the government, which has bren criticized by right-wing elements who support Col. San Mortin, has decided to show it has lost patience with the disturbances in Institutions on which it has lavished so much money and attention.

The government is demanding that contract professors and instructors provide a police con-tificate of good conduct with their application. Col. San Marlin's surveillance unit then attaches a secret report on the applicant's political background in his papers, sources say.

"Only those professors who have used their classrooms to promote subversive ideas which have nothing to do with education have: anything to fear," said a source.
"If we really wanted to get tough, the blacklist would be much longer."

Ulster Talks a Disappointment By Bernard Weinraub

ONDON (NYT).-Within the next few days, William Whitelaw, Northern Ireland's administrator, and his advisers in Belfast and London will set out to deal with the precarious political options that face Uister.

The hazards that Mr. Whitelaw and the British government face were made especially clear at the three-day conference on the political future of Northern Ireland that ended last night. The Ulster delegates, and probably Mr. Whitelaw, returned home in a mood that hlended all the tangled emotions of the Northern Ireland crisis: disappointment, anger, confusion and just a trace of

For one, Mr. Whitelaw clearly disappointed the delegates from the three Northern Ireland parties with the decision that Britain will not issue any final pronouncement about the politi-cal future of Ulster, which had been expected. Instead, Britain will list the various options that face Ulster and contain an analysis behind each one—a delaying tactic clearly meant to bide time in the hope of curbing violence.

ion, called it a "disastrous decision." The Guardian, a lett-of-center newspaper, said yesterday: "Nothing is to be gained and much to be lost by delay."

Mr. Whitelaw was obviously disappointed too. The groups at-tending the meeting in Darlington, England, maintained the same positions they beld before the three days of talks. The Unionist party, which dominated Northern Ireland for 51 years until Britain imposed direct rule in March, essentially insisted on Protestant ascendancy in the province. The twn moderate groups, the Alliance and Northern Ireland Labor party. pressed their case for a local assembly the some powers firmly in the hands of the Catholic minority, and the local police under the control of the British government instead of Ulster's Protestants.

Moreover, British officials were deeply disappointed about the conference boycott of the political parties directly linked to the Catholic minority—a boycott comparable to Israel not attending a political conference on tha Middle East. The opposition parties failed to appear because 241 Catholics, suspected mem-hers of the Irish Republican Army, are still held in the Long Kesh internment camp.

Although Mr. Whitelaw and his colleagues have emphasized their "open mind" on Ulster, an outline of the new system has become apparent over the last three days. The new plan iargely discards the course of action urged by the Unionist party and, to a lesser degree, the predominantly Catholic Social Democratic and Labor party. The party recently proposed that Britain and the Irish Republic have joint control over Ulster as an interim step toward the unification of North ern Ireland, where two-thirds of the population is Protestant. In the Irish Republic, 95 percent of the population is Catholic,

Britain's limited objective would be to achieve Protestant consent for an administration in which the Catholic minority would have an active share. On a broader scale, the British government is now contemplating a 100-seat assembly to replace the 52 member ment that was disbanded with direct rule, Membership in the assembly would be based on proportional representation that would give the Catholic groups, 25 Well as moderate parties, a sizable share of seats.

Although the new assembly would have control over domestic affairs, such as health, education and development, responsibility for the army as well as many functions of the police would re been the case since direct rule.

Sources also indicate that Britain will also call for a council of Ireland—comprised of repre-sentatives from Ulster, the Irish Republic and London-to deal with mutual economic problems, especially in the event of Britsin's entry into the EEC.

One reason for the delay in the ban is the failure thus far to reach uniformity on the valueadded tax among the six Common Market countries and their candidates for admission. In the Netherlands, the VAT has reached a 14 percent level in the three years since it was introduced. Britain will not have the sales levy until hext year.

Airport managers are justifiably concerned about anything that would curtail the flow of shoppers' money into their tills. After CAB Eases Ticket Restrictions

Charter-Flight Battle Goes to the U.S. Courts

By Robert Lindsey

NEW YORK (NYT).—A bitter legal battle has begun to develop between scheduled and nonscheduled airlines over a new civil Aeronautics Board regulation that will permit all Americans to ily on low-cost charter

At stake are billions of dollars for the rival airline factions and the possibility that air transportation could undergo historic changes that would affect millions of American travelers.

The nonscheduled airlines apparently won the first round in the dispute when-in what was clearly a tactival move-they filed three suits in a Washington federal court to appeal certain features of the regulation. The quick action had the effect.

of insuring that the inevitable

court battle over the regulation will be heard in the Washington court, where the nonscheduled airlines feel they have a better chance of winning than in New York, where the scheduled airlines were expected to file suit. Ending months of debete on the issue, the CAB voted 3 to 2 dnesday to permit any person to take advantage of the "bulk buying" principle of charter student, ethnic and fraternal groups, clubs, unions or other so-"affinity" groups were legally eligible for charter flights. They had to have been members of the organization for at least six months, although this restriction was widely violated.

Because charter airlines usually fly with all-or virtually all-of their seats occupied, passengers typically pay about half as much as they would on regularly scheduled flights.

This is because fares on scheduled airlines reflect the cost of flying airliners by timetables on a year-round basis, taking off whether there are customers or not. On the average, their planes fly with half the seats empty.

The CAB-es well as governments in Europe and other conntries had been under growing pressure from consumer groups and political leaders to drop the eligibility restrictions on the ground that they discriminated against travelers who did not belong to organizations.

To qualify for charter flights, passengers will have to sign up for the trips at least three months before departure and pay a de-posit of 25 percent of the fare, a deposit which will not be refund40 or more at charter rates. The travel groups will be formed by travel agents acting on behalf of travelers or by any person who assembles a group of 39 or more other persons in the interest of saving travel expenses. Members

Scottish Company Turning To Classics to Gain Depth

By Oleg Kerensky YORK, England (IHT).-Lip service has been paid for several years to the idea of decentralizing British ballet, instead of it all being based on London. Until recently, however, there were only two regional companies of any importance and both of those were small groups, specializing in modern chamber works rather than at-tempting the standard classics. Northern Dance Theatre, based in Manchester, is still in that

But two years ago, Western Theatre Ballet, which originally hailed from Bristol, translated itself into Scottish Theatre Ballet and set about establishing itself rathe national ballet of Scotland, hazed in Glasgow. It now has 26 timeers and a smull orchestra, and Peter Darrell, the artistic director, is gradually trying to enrich the repertoire with some of the wellally more reverding to the boxoffice, the dencers audience, than more experimental

Last week at York, the company launched its autumn tour with its first staging of The Nuteracker," Act 2. The intention is to add the first act next year. The "Kingdom of Sweets" from "The Nutcracker" is never the most exciting or interesting of clausical divertissements and it really needs spectacle, a big erchestra and first-class dancers to make its full effect.

The biggest snag is that the new choreography, especially devised for his dancers by Mr. Darrell, is not very interesting. The Arabian dence, for example, starts with a female soloist being

The famous pas de deux for the Sugar Plum fairy and the prince is more or less as Ivanov intended, and was very capably danced by both casts I saw, But the total effect is mild rather than exciting and the impression left, as by Mr. Darrell's unusually dramatic version of "Giselle" last year, is that the company is not strong enough technically to do justice to the classics.

3 Short Works

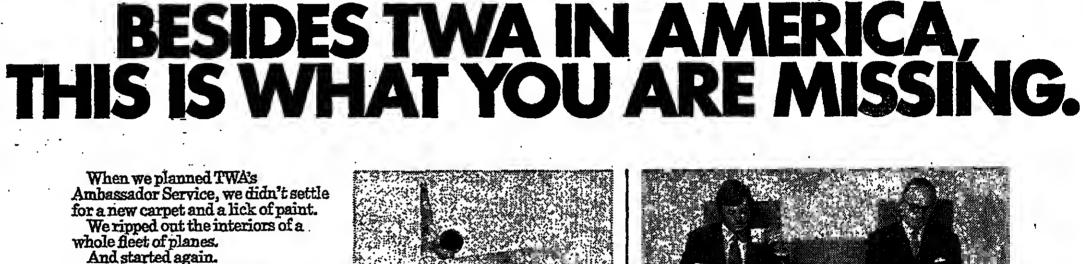

"The Nutcracker" was preceded by three short works inherited from Western Theatre Ballet. Walter Gore's "Light Fantastic" is a charming little suite, with a particularly touching number in which a self-confident philanderer pretends to show a moony ditherer how to catch a girl, but actually take, the girl himself. Cristian Addams (a new recruit Michael Beare (formerly of the Royal Ballet) and Sally Collard-Gentle gave it a lot of character. It was unfortunate that owing to one of those many mishaps that plague all tours, the orches-tration was not available and Chabrier's music had to be played as a trio for two planists and a

This was the more regretable as the two following works, Jack Carter's "Cage of God" and Maurice Béjart's "Sonate à Trois," also use only two or three instru-ments; both of them are similar too in attempting to tell complex stories through simple dance and mime, with "Sonate & Trois" being the more successful of the two. But, like "Light Pantastic," it involves a lot of play with chairs, which also contributed to a feeling of repetitiveness about the first part of the program.

The other program, which Scottish Theatre Ballet is now presenting, is "Tales of Hoff-mann," a three-act ballet by Mr. Darrell, which had its world premiere in Scotland in April, I had not seen it before end it has not yet been performed in Lon-don. It is an immensely enjoyable and skillful balletic version of the opers and is easily the best thing Mr. Darrell has yet done. It shows the company to great advantage, making them look as such good classical dancers as to strengthen one's regret that they were not further extended in "The Nnteracker."

Melodions Score

John Lanchbery has arranged a melodious and danceable score from the opera and other pieces of Offenbach, and Alistair Livingstone has designed a series of splendid costumes and sets. Jorge Salavies, another recruit from feetival, captured the various moods and ages of Hoffmann and was suitably elegant in the vision scene which Mr. Darrell has invented for the Antonia episode. Marian St. Claire was a levely Antonia, both as the gentle and loving invalid and as the stylish balterina she becomes when hypnotized by Dr. Miracle. Hilary Debden as the doll Olymbia and Elaine McDonald as the courtesan Giulietta Tire admirable too, and to were Harold King, Kit Lethby and Michael Beare as three bounty boys in the tavern scene. The style of the ballet is a mixture of folksy Bournonville, character Massine and neo-classical Cranko. Mr. Darrell's choreography may not be original but it is attractive and theatrical and tells the story very clearly, even rounding it off more neatly than the unfinished opera. It is exactly the kind of work Scottish Theatre Ballet needs to win new audiences with a dulineure repertoire of its exit.

The New Asia

his agreement with the Chinese government is one of the most dramatic events in modern Asian history. Consider: Japan has been technically at war with Mainland China since 1941: actually at war since 1937, and in state of quasi-war certainly since 1931, when the "Manchurian Incident" and the subsequent creation of the puppet state of Manchoukuo by Japan spread the explosive materia's that were to by fired into long and ravaging conflict. One might even go back to 1915, when Japan took over (and expanded) imperial Germany's holdings in China; to the Russo-Japanese war, 10 years before that, when Japan succeeded to most of czarist Russia's interests in Manchuria, or another decade earlier, when the new Japan won its first war-against China-and a foothold in Korea.

To bring a diplomatic close to such a history is much, to arrange for peaceful and, presumably, mntually advantageous relations between the world's most populous nation and one of the great industrial powers is even more—in terms of the future. To a very large degree, the Tanaka-Chou accord sets a seal on the new Asia—an Asia in which the governments are preponderantly indigenous rather than largely colonial; in which the Soviet Union remains the only European nation with great strategic interest, and in which the United States, although still powerful, can be at most first among equals in a Pacific community.

The change over the past generation has results of the American President's travels.

Premier Tanaka's journey to Peking and been truly revolutionary—as revolutionary as the unification of Mainland China under Mao. The agreement with Japan marks a victory for the Chinese, in that it confirms its territorial integrity against an ambitious neighbor, and a victory for industrialized Japan that was denied to militarized Japan. What it will hold for the future depends in part upon how China and Japan adapt themselves to their new relationship, to one another and to the continent in which they now loom so large, each in its ashion. It will depend, too, on how the Soviet Union and the United States adapt, and the extent to which they acknowledge the realities of which the Tanaka-Chou communiqué was only a formal expression.

For the United States, those realities were long masked by considerations which, however important they seemed at the time, say, of the Korean War, the bombardments of Quemoy and Matsu, or the initial involvements in Indochina, are certainly outdated. That this was openly recognized by the fact of President Nixon's visit to Peking is a manifestation of practical statesmanship, for only in that way, by a pioneering effort on the part of the United States, could the present rapprochement between China and Japan have been achieved without major friction in the Pacific. The warmth that invested the formalities of Mr. Tanaka's departure for Tokyo may have eclipsed the politeness that accompanied Mr. Nixon to Air Force 1-but what it represents is unquestionably among the most important

The World's People

In recent days two milestones of sorts were Nations, with Secretary-General Waldheim's passed in the long campaign to reduce the ronaway rate of world population growth. Both are encouraging; neither implies solntion of any of the basic problems.

In this country, federal statistics indicate that the fertility rate for the last half-year has dropped to the precise level indicated as necessary to offset deaths. Census Burean statisticians believe that this is the first time this so-called replacement level—2.1 children per woman of child-bearing age-has been held for as long as six months.

Behind the encouraging statistical extrapolations, however, is the sober fact that this low fertility rate would have to be maintained for as long as seventy years—through two generations-before the United States would achieve a zero population growth. And many demographers believe that the lowered birth rate of the past five years could easily be reversed in coming years, particularly since there are now 1.9 million women aged eighteen, compared with 1.1 million 20 years ago.

The second milestone came at the United

call for a world conference on demography in 1974, designated "world population year."

Until recent years, the issue of population growth touched such sensitive national, religious and moral nerves that it could scarcely be raised at the United Nations. Even now, in much of the less developed world, the governments' lip service to family planning programs stirs little or no enthusiasm for effective implementation. Whether from moral hesitancy or the mistaken belief that military and political power depends on ever-increasing numbers of people, the population in Africa, Latin America and much of Asia continues to grow at an explosive 2 1/2 percent yearly.

Population growth is a problem for the industrialized countries as much as the less developed. The forthcoming world demographic conferences will force systematic study by governments and interested agencles into problems which all share and to which no one yet has the answers.

the-war amendment to a military aid authorization bill has cleared the way for early enactment of comprehensive foreign assistance legislation.

The emerging aid package is deplorably weighted in favor of military assistance, much of it of dubious merit. The overall ald appropriation that was passed by the House last week provides for a $449-million increase in arms aid over last year's appropriation, with the bulk of the $1.93-billion total allocated to supporting assistance and grant aid that are largely earmarked for South Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos and Thailand. The Senate's authorization action sustains this misdirection of the major part of necessarily limited U.S. foreign assistance funds to the destructive and futile Indochina

Nevertheless, there are some positive features in the prospective aid package that should not be sacrificed. The House bill encompasses a modest, but nonetheless welcome, increase in economic appropriations. Even more generous economic aid provisions are contained in a bill reported by the Senate Appropriations Committee, including

The Senate's latest rejection of an end- full funding for the Inter-American and Asian Development Banks, which were severely cut in the House measure. Both the House and the Senate committees have provided for a long-overdne American contribution of $320 million to the International Development Association, the soft loan window of the World Bank,

> A bad aid bill which includes such constructive elements is better than none at all, especially at a time when the World Bank and other international institutions have been calling attention to the ominously widening gap between have and have-not nations around the world. But the United States should be giving much more. At 2 time when other developed nations are moving ahead toward the United Nations target of 0.7 percent of gross national product allocated to external development assistance. the American effort has dropped to around 0.32 percent of GNP. This country will not regain its rightful role of leadership in the area of international cooperation and development until it finally renounces the war in Southeast Asia that has so grossly distorted its foreign policy priorities.

Japan-China Relations

One must think big to grasp the momentous significance of the agreement restoring the relations between Peking and Tokyo which the old pre-war Japan so rudely shattered. Mao-Confucious turned Communist party boss -- condescendingly but politely accepted the dignified apologies of Mr. Tanaka, symbolic samurai of the world'e peaceful export markets. Chiang Kai-shek once again served as ritual sacrifice by having recognition transferred from Formosa to China. All this is the inevitable consequence of the Sino-American detente.

which itself was the inevitable acceptance of a saner Rcd China's place in the balance of power against an expansionist Russia. In both cases, what had to be done has been done as well, as smoothly and as sensibly as was possible in the circumstances. Yet the result is to end the relative strategic and diplomatic freeze which American power has achieved in the Pacific. The whole vast area seems destined to become an arena for great power competition, second to none in importance. . . diplomats of the world get ont your maps of the Pacific.

The Cuban question is still the main one to be considered and Senor Sagasta by his championship of home rule for Cuba seems to offer a way of satisfying the Cubans.

BELGRADE-In a village near Belgrade, the solid but modest peasant homes have new neighbors. Alongside many of them have appeared glass and brick villas, some with modernistic, swooping roofs and touches that have an obvious debt to Frank Lloyd Wright.

The peasants refer to owners of these houses as "bogasti"-the rich guys and many seem to resent their appearance in the Villa owners in turn have told of having their houses vandalized during their absence, and of finding little sympathy among the local police.

The villas are the most visible evidence of the new, propertied middle class which is enjoying unprecedented affluence in Yugoslava. The frictions are much the same as in non-Communist ple near the bottom and professional men near the top.

The phenomenon is at the center of an ideological debate which many people think may signal a mild swing of the political pen-dulum in Yugoslavia. President Tito has lashed out at the "billionaires" who have illegally accumulated wealth. Stane Dolanc, the Slovene who is in charge of Tito's campaign to restore party authority in every walk of life, has said fistly that "fliegally attained property must be returned."

In the first place U.S. officials quoted in the Associated Press article have no business talking about atrocities committed by Communist forces when the U.S. government and its Vietnamese agents in Salgon have been guilty of the slaughter of several hundred thousand civilians since the war began, at least according to the reports emanating from Sen. Burger on the Court

By James Reston

WASHINGTON -A new session of the Supreme Court is now starting, and there is some talk around here that the socalled Nixon Court may have a more enduring influence on the history of the Republic in the next 20 years than anything elso Mr. Nixon has done or will do.

This may very well be true. Franklin Roosevelt, for all his influence on the Court, was into his second term in the White House before he was able to make his first Supreme Court appoint-ment—Hugo Lafayette Black Of Alabama. But Mr. Nixon has al-ready been able to appoint four of the nine justices, including Chief Justice Burger, in his first three and a half years, and if he is re-elected in November, which is not an outrageous assumption, he may appoint one or two more,

Justice William O. Douglas and Justice William J. Brennan are said to be holding on primarily to retain a strong liberal voice on the court, and Justice Thur-good Marshall was reported recently to be in poor health, though a careful check suggests that this report was exaggerated, if not wholly untrue.

Already some observers feel that Mr. Nixon's four appointers have made some difference on criminal and First Amendment cases, but it is a little early and maybe even a little silly to talk about a "Nixon Court" as if these appointees would follow a prearranged ideological line.

No Reversals

For example, the court as now organized has not reversed a single decision of the court presided over by Chief Justice Earl Warren, and the new chief justice feels it is imprudent to assume that this court has changed direction. He prefers to talk about a change of pace.

Chief Justice Burger is very much concerned about the rising burden of cases. He points out that the U.S. dirtrict courts had 93,000 cases 10 years ago, and 145,000 cases last year; 10 years ago, the U.S. courts of appeals had 4,200 appeals filed, and last year more than 14,500; 10 years ago, 2,400 cases in the Supreme Court, and last year more than

"This is an unprecedented ex-plosion of litigation," Chief Justice Burger told the American Bar Atrociation recently, "and it significantly outpaces the growth of population. Even though we have increased the number of active federal judgeships from 384 to 498 in the last 10 years, that is less than half the rate of increase in cuses. "Furthermore, new kinds cases present movel and difficult problems; criminal cases take from two to three times as hing to try as in times past; dispositions by picas of guilty have declined due to many factors, including relaxed ball standard; dilatory tactics are being used to exploit the liberal ball protisions while the multiplicity of continuances consume the time of judges and court perconnel.

Even if there had not been any changes in the persented of tim changes in the personner of the highest court, Chief Justice Burger believes that these "new kinds of cases" and "nevel and difficult problems" would have compelled the court to be cautious. about taking on foo many cates or trying to dispose of them without the greatest care.

The chief justice recognizes that especially in an election year the court will be an object of con-troversy and criticism, but he believes it is unwise to charge. terise the new members of the until they have had a great deal more time on the bench. He would leave some time, to for the influence of argument in chambers and points to the fed that he and Associate Justin Black, while they were supposed to be of differing and even conflicting judicial philosophics, artually came to be close personal friends with mutual respect for each other's views.

History of Shifts

The history of the court, of course, is replate with account of nich who came on the bench with reputations as extreme conservatives or liberals and who changed fundamentally under the influence of changing events and the honest clash of argument.

Accordingly, it is the chies justice's hope that the new cour will be able to work away a little more quietly in the coming session than in the past. He has introduced new procedures to help the press improve its coresage of the court and hopes to see an end to personalizing the court. He wonders, for example, if a really helps objective appraise of the court's work to have if characterized as the "Nixer Court" or the "Burger Court" or the "Warren Court." Its member are individuals with their own views and separate personalities and are not likely to be under influenced by the chief justice Maybe it was fair to talk about the "Marshall Court," but in general Chief Justice Burger feel; that even this tends to disimit the work of diverse and champing men who respond to different ways to changing conditions.

Is Paris Happening?

By Anthony Lewis

OSTON.—Outside of the small circle officially invoived, none of us can really be informed on the state of the talks between Henry A. Rissinger and Le Duc Tho. But among some people who have thought about Vietnam for years there is now a feeling-a tingling sensation, as one put itthat something just could happen in Paris.

After all the disappointments of past years, any hope of a nego-tiated end to the war must be shadowed by skepticism. Doubts are strengthened by the knowledge that President Nixon will use the very fact of the talks going un for political purposes.

"On the basis of experience." one man long concerned with the Vietnam problem said, "you have to think that any sign of possible success in the negotiations is a combination of false hopes and game-playing by Nixon and Kis-singer." The North Vietnamese have publicly discounted talk of ss in Paris, and sources close to them still speak of election-year American politics. On the other hand, one has to

been in North Vietnam recently report no sisckening in the expressed determination to bear the burdens of the war, including American bombing, indefinitely if necessary. Nor is there any convincing sign of a crippled capacity to fight. Richard Dudman of The St. Louis Post-Dispatch saw long lines of trucks bearing weapons and supplies between Hai-phong and Hanol. But a continuing war effort would not be inconsistent with a decision by the North Victnamese leaders to try seriously for a settlement. They may have a different perception now of Ameri-can political and psychological realities. They may be feeling more pressure from the constitnencies that matter to them-in Moscow and Peking French officials, who have as good contacts as anyone with the two sides in the peace talks, are expressing a high degree of optimism.

What, then, could be the framework of a settlement? Even to explore that question in a speculative way is to realize the immense in tellectual difficulties involved in trying to compromise positions so deeply opposed in political objectives, fears and price. In President Nixon's declared view the only appropriate way to change the legitimate government in Salgon is by elections United States will not join in imposing a coalition government because that could be a cover for sembly to draft a new one. . . Communist control and a "blood-The trouble is that statingsuch

It wants the United States to agree to a coalition by way of final settlement before leaving, so the Americans will have no excuse for returningspecifically for resuming the bombing—if unwelcome political change occurs in Saigon.

In general terms, one can begin to imagine ways of closing those wide differences. President Thieu could resign a much longer time before elections than the one month the U.S. has offered, but leaving the Saigon administra-tion otherwise intact. The political future could be fudged by leaving each side in control of its own areas, offering some form of guarantees for physical safety and protection from arrest on both

Most difficult of all, would Nguyen Van Thieu be willing to resign for the sake of a settlement, betting that he will come back to power in the political process started by the agreement? The problems are so hard that en new intentions on both sides, if they exist, may not succeed. If they do, it will be because the North Victnamese are made to be-lieve at last that the Americans are going to leave and stay away -and because President Nixon comes to that determination himself in his view of Salgon.

Economic Optimism in U.S. Is Unbridled Everywhere Except in the Investment World

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (NYT).-The one strain that continues to pervade the economic assessments pouring out of economic, business and government circles these days is unbridled optimism, despite some legitimate question marks, on a number of issues and in the face of a strange, highly pessimistic mood in the investment world. The confidence over the state of the economy and its prospects is based on some impressive data from the major indicators, particularly the leading series. The reservations are based on uncertainty over the way Washington will cope with inflation, fiscal, monetary, employment and economic-control probleme next

Except for the lag in obtaining a significant reduction in the still high 5.6 percent unemployment rate, the American economy was vigorous and becoming healthier as the third quarter of the year closed Friday. The broadest barometer of the economy's performance—the gross national product—is expected to have shown another sharp increase in the three months that ended Sept. 30. Most esti-mates have been in a range of $25 billion to $30 billion, maintaining the economy on a satis-factory "real," or noninflationary, growth path of about 6 percent this year.

The year is certain to be big from the standpoint of total goods and services produced. While the impetus for this expansion is still coming largely from the consumer sector, it is being buttressed by rising business and government spending as well as a liberal monetary policy.

Total retail sales in August. for example, surged to a record averaging almost 10 percent higher than in the summer of 1971. And the gain in September was probably almost as great, indicating an increase of perhaps $16 billion in total personal consumption for the third quarter. The record demand for new automobiles and the surge in housing activity have been major factors propelling the current boom, but there have also been a significant rise in government spending at all levels and a big step-up in business investment

While there may be little room for debate over the general eco-nomic picture, the unemploya subject of interest and discussion this fall.

In some quarters, the emphasis will be on the need to push it lower and toward the 4 percent goal so frequently mentioned. In others, there will be expressions of concern over the pressure on the price level that the approach toward that figure may bring and assertions that a 4 percent target is no longer valid. These will be based on the structural changes in the labor force, with so many more women and youths now part of it than in earlier years.

for new plant, equipment and in-Joblessness among married males is down to 2.6 percentwell below the 4 percent target but with women and youths for the second month in a row, ment situation will certainly be the rate has been traditionally much higher.

What's ahead for the economy? More and broader growth, say virtually all of the analysts. Every condition necessary for further expansion still seems to be present in convincing fashion. Retail volume has continued to grow: housing is maintaining its 2.2 million annual rate of starts: defense spending has turned moderately upward; the demand for inventory has become positive: the rate of capital spending is also rising, and the posture of federal policy remains strongly

Few Signs of Decay

Moreover, few, if any, of the expectable signs of deterioration in business conditions that typically preceds a business-cycle turning point are now visible.

When a business-cycle peak is at hand or nearing, consumer attitudes would have stopped improving: there would be a rising relationship of business inventories to sales and of inventories to backlogs, and there would be a decline in the ordering rates in capital-goods industries after a prolonged expansion and as the volume of idle plant capacity rises. But none of these conditions now exist. In fact, the reverse situation prevails in all of those areas. Another particularly encouraging sign was the sharp rise just reported in the government's in-dex of the leading economic indicators. The index jumped 2.2 percent in August to 145.5 per-cent of the 1967 average, an unusually large rise for a single month that probably augurs further economic expansion on a broad front.

Amex and Over-Counter

By Alexander R. Hammer

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Helped by some favorable news developments, the American Stock Exchange and the Over-the-Counter market managed to end slightly higher last week in moderate trading.

The main bullish report that carried considerable weight with investors on Wednesday was that presidential adviser Henry A. Rissinger was making progress in his current talks with the North Vietnamese in Paris. After the market closed, a spokesman for the White House deflated the report.

One broker noted that buying in both the exchange and counter markets last week was very selective, as investors sought issues that had been depressed recently or had prospects of advancing on favorable corporate news.

The exchange's price index finished the week at 26.18, up 0.12 from the close of the preceding week. Supporters of the low coupon point to previous ETB dollar issues, the 7 1/2s of 1984 and 1990, which are both trading over par and which show a yield to maturity of 7.22 and 7.27 percent, respectively.

Critics contend that the terms are too skimpy. Part of the problem in assessing the terms is that some bankers are not happy with the way the issue was put together. The underwriting group, which frequently can run to 100 or so banks, has been merged with the managing group. (some 10 banks in this case)eliminating the 1/2 percent commission usually set aside for un-derwriters. Although the normal 1.5 percent is still paid to mem-

GM Expects Profit Decline

NEW YORK Oct. 1 (Reuters).-General Motors Corp. expects third-quarter profits to be below the same period of last year and below the second quarter of this year, chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg said.

GM's 1971 third-quarter earnings were 75 cents a chare. In the second quarter this year, earnings were $2.52. Mr. Gerstenberg also said that profitability would be "substantially impaired" if the Price Commission refuses to allow price increases requested by the company on 1973 models. He noted that GM is facing cost increases on each new car of about $200.

bankers said they prefer to try to sell bonds where they get both selling group and underwriting

Therefore, it is hard to tell whether 7 1/4 percent is feasible at this time. If the issue is a success, it will be credited to the fact that Nikko Securities will have sold some 20 percent in Japan (where it has been given exclusive selling rights) and to the fact that the issue is eligible for sale to Italian institutions, which have little opportunity to buy dollar Eurobonds especially those that are completely exempt from texes there. If the issue goes badly, it will be chalked up to the number of bankers' noses put out of joint.

Also on offer is $30 million of 18-year paper from Cadbury Schweppes, expected with a 7 3/4 percent coupon. The sinking fund will not start operating until 1978, giving the issue an average longer-than this market is accustomed to.

A$30-million issue from Singa pore also will carry a 7 3/4 percent coupon, but it will be priced at a discount to yield more than 8 percent. Daiwa Securities is managing the issue and much of it is expected to be sold in Japan.

British Land, a U.K. property company, is floating a 15-year bond of $16 million, to refund Eurodollar bank loans, with coupon expected at 8 percent. Still on offer is Blue Ball's $20 million of 15-year bonds expected with a 7 3/4 percent coupon and Hungary's $50 million of 8 1/2 percent bonds. There were $120 million worth of bonds priced last week. Inter national Telephone & Telegraph' $50-million convertible came out with a 4 3/4 percent coupon and a 10 percent conversion premium at par. Allotments were reportedly generous and early weaknes in the issue was crased thanks to Wall Street's rally.

General Shopping, a $25-mil lion convertible, carried a 5 1/4 percent coupon and a premium of Brascan International's $20 million of 8 1/4 percent bonds also came at par. Hambros, which raised $25 million at 7 3'4 percent, had its bonds priced at

Overall, Eurobond activity in the first nine months of the year, as measured by Kradietbank Luxembourgeoise, has topped the $3.51-billion total for all of 1971. It puts the nine-month total of new issues at the equivalent of $3,612 billion, of which $1,194 billion was raised during the third

However defensive error could have been North showed one ace with a prevented if East had dropped live-diamond response. A slam was now out of the question, and to deny possession of the king.
As it was West continued with the problem was to find the safest contract at the five-level. Five no-trump had much to recommend it but there was no way to convey that information to North; five notrump would have asked for kings, and five of either major suit would have indicated a desire to play in the contract

Five spades was a possibility, since a five-three fit was guaranteed, but South did not want East on lead: If West held the club ace, an opening lead in clubs would probably give the defense three quick tricks. So South chose pass five diamonds, primarily to have the likely club lead come

When Cattolica asks vulgar and insolent questions shout Judaism, the narrator answers him "point by point, with feverish exaggerated enthusiasm." At the end of the interrogation, however, he has the presence of mind to ask Catto-lica a question of his own: Has Cattolica's family always been Catholic?

"I should say so," he answered, with a brief, proud smile. "Why?" Oh I don't know. Cattolica is the name of a town on the coast near Riccione and Italian Jews, as you know, all have the names of towns and "He stiffened." Bassani says no more, does not melodramatise, but as Cattolica stiffens we reglize how deeply pervasive is suit-Semilism, how radically and impersonally it dwells in us, as products of cen-turies of Western culture—Jews themselves, like the narrator, as products of that culture too, not

Pinally the narrator gets his wish, to have, like Cattolics, a classmate come to his house each day after school. This newcomer, Pulsa, repels him immediately, yet flatters him with his obseyet flatters him with his obse-quiousness. Clemente 11th Player At 3,000-Hit Plateau

لكدامة للمل

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 1 (NYT).-Roberto Clemente, who complained bitterly when he felt the official scorer deprived him of his 3,000th hit Priday night, finally achieved his cherished goal yesterday when he stroked a long double to left-center field in the fourth inning to become the 11th man in major league history to reach the 3.000-hit plateau.

Clemente's double, opening the fourth inning, started a three-run Pittsburgh Pirate rally that resulted in a 5-0 victory over the New York Mets.

"I'd rather have it this way," Clemente said afterward. somewhat repentant for his outburst of the previous night when a ground ball back over the mound was bobbled by Ken Boswell and was ruled an error.

There was no doubt about the hit that put the great Puerto Rican star in a class with Ty Cobb, Stan Musial, Tris Speaker, Honus Wagner, Henry Aaron, Eddie Collins, Nap Lajoie, Willie Mays, Paul Waner and Cap Anson.

Clemente's hit off John Matlack reached the left-center wall on one bounce. Dave Schneck picked it up. threw it back into the short-stop, Fregesi, who in turn gave it to umpire Doug Harvey. The umpire then handed it to Clemente and shook his hand.

As the 13,117 fans stood to give Clemente an ovation, the Pirate star stood on second base and raised his cap. The game was halted for several minutes while the fans cheered their 38-year-old idol. Clemente played one more inning in the field and then, as he returned to the dugout, Willie Mays trotted over from the Mets' dugout and offered his congratulations. Mays and Aaron are the only other active players with 3,000 or more hits.

Clemente said that he had spent a sleepless night be-cause of all the telephone calls from New York and Puerto Rico following his near-miss last night.

Then my wife had to be at the airport at 6 o'clock to meet some friends so we didn't even bother to go to bed." "When I arrived at the ball park I had no sleep

The Redskins' Bill Malinchak blocked a punt with 50 seconds left in the game, and the ball went out of the end zone for a safety to make it 24-23.

Washington had three fieldgoal opportunities in the closing minutes. Knight hit on a 33-yarder with 1:39 left that would have tied the score at 24-24, but Washington chose to accept a roughingthe-kicker penalty for a first down and an opportunity for a touchdown. Three plays later, however, Knight was wide to the right on a 27-yard scoring attempt with 1:17 to go. He was again wide to the right on a 50yard attempt with six seconds left following the Washington safety.

Whither James Bond?

By Russell Baker

joys of owning books flows from the opportunity afforded from time to time to prune and reorganize the bookshelves. Periodically, it becomes important to pull out certain brooks and send them to the attic, and to pull out certain other books and throw them out of the house altogether. One makes statements about htmself in this pruning and re-Baker library. One is learning where he is going, where he has been, what has happened to him lately, who he is becoming, who he no longer is. For obvious reasons, then, some decisions can be extremely difficult. Even as these very words are being written, for example, the entire Ian Fleming canon-"Gold-"Thunderhall," "Dr. No," and all (in paperback, of course) -lies on the floor here beside the typewriter, just as it has for two days past, waiting for a vital decision about the owner's iden-

Shouldn't these books-really. now-be chucked out of the house altogether, dispatched for disposal at some eleemosynary event euch as the Vassar book sale? Two days ago, this eeemed the ohvious adult decision. The James Bond fantesy-well, how could it not be sent away when The Female Eunnch," by Ger-name Greer, had just been awarded an important place on the bookshelf (between Paul Samuelson's "Economics" and "Chicken Inspector No. 23." by S. J. Perel-

Keeping Bond on display would connote a lack of intellectual consistency very damaging to the reputation in this period of jackbooted mentality. It would also be a little silly in view of the fast that "The Cause, Prevention and Treatment of Backache," by Hans Kraus, M. D., had just been placed prominently in the reference book division, replacing "How to Buy Stocks."

Having this Bond decision to make helps one sympathize with the President, Of course the sensible thing is to get out of Vietnam, and of course the sensible thing is to send "From Russia, With Love" to one of the book sales-and yet. At a guess, Bond will end up in the attic.

That attic! That attic is to the book owner what a special commission is to the President of the United States. If there is a book posing an urgent decision about one's life that one would rather not have to make, it can be bucked up to the attic, just commissions for inaction.

The books culled from tha shelves on account of loss of relevance may turn the sentimental man to jelly. Here is a whole pile that is being sent away. The titles make the eves a bit misty: "Adolescents," "Suburbia's Coddied Kids," "How Children Fail." "The Gifted Child," "Growing up Absurd."

Vanished Adolescent," "The Voices from the Drug Culture." It is too painful to continue the list. A page has turned, a land has been left behind and will not be visited again. The holes they have left will be filled with works more relevant to the present era-"You Are as Young as Your Spine," by Editha Hearn; "Liquor: The Servant of Man," by Dr. Morris E Chafetz; 'My Escape From the CIA," by Hughues Rudd; "A History of Oriental Orgies," by James Cleugh; and "Manic De-pressive Illness," by Winokur, Clayton and Reich.

One of the curious aspects of a home library is the number of books which survive pruning after pruning and reorganization after reorganization for reasons that must be purely sentimental.

What does it say of a man, for example, that he has not had the willpower over 20 years past to send "Studs Lonigan" to the attic? Could its reading have coincided with a long forgotten high-school romance? Was there once a book report on "Studs" that scored an "A"? It is simply impossible to say, just as it is simply impossible to send him to the attic where he belongs.

Now, here is the kind of decision everybody must love to make. All these wonderful books by Raymond Chandler. Of course they must stay. What sort of man would send Raymond Chandler to the book sales or even to the attic, and let Proust's "Remembrance of Things Past" continue to hold space on his shelves? And yet, Proust cannot be dispatched either, for one of these days-mark these words, Marcel!"-he is going to be read -from cover to cover.

The temptation is almost obscene. It is to take out all those two full shelves on the Civil War. It was, let us admit it about the Civil War, not really worth all that space, all those noble Bruce Cattons. If, now, we take out the Civil War books, we will have room not only for the Raymond Chandlers, but also the Eric Amblers, and the Dashiel Hammetts, and we could keep "This Is Eric Sevareid" and the three volumes of Pauline Kael, andyou know what? - the whole James Bond collection would just fit in the space that's left!

Humor as Weapon Still Packs a Punch

By Donald E. Mullen

NEW YORK (UPI).-In 1841, an Englishman who couldn't make a go of tavern keeping began publishing a magazine that daringly for its time—took satirical swipes at the pomposity of Victorian Britain. He made a go of that, and today the 10th editor of Punch magazine is keeping up that same tradition of poking fun at pious politicians, unctuous personalities and sanctimonious systems—the world over. But, says William Davis, the problem these days is convincing people that finely honed humor is the best weapon in any

"There's a lack of humor these days around the world," he said in an interview during a recent New York visit. "Take the American election. There's a need for humor as a weapon—as a force—to ridicule some of the goings-on. "If McGovern could get himself a few could close the gap. He could use it the way Churchill did by cutting people down

"But," he said with a sigh, "I'm afraid it's going to be all so serious . . . John Kennedy was the last real wit."

At first sight, Mr. Davis doesn't seem to fit the picture of editor of such a venerable magazine as Punch. At 39 he is an enthusiastic, 21-year veteran of London's Fleet Street journalism skirmishes, and an expert financial writer. He was wearing long sideburns, a big round collar and the easy air of a man who knows the news game on both sides

His biggest problem is correcting a long-held impression that Punch is an oldfashioned little English magazine full of stories about mumbling sources and horse-
